

Name	Michael Pfeilstöcker
Current Position	consultant / Hanusch Hospital Associate professor/ Vienna Medical University
Country	Austria
Major Field	Hematology/Oncology

Educational Background

1987	MD
1987-1990	Postdoc, Mol. biol and cancer research
1990-1996	Internship and residency, Hanusch hospital, 1996 board certified in internal medicine
1997	board certified in hematology/oncology senior house officer in hematology/oncology
2001	venia legendi - internal medicine/hem-onc
2001-2009	Director, Ludwig Boltzmann Institute for Leukemia Research & Hematology (since 2009 part of cluster oncology of the Ludwig Boltzmann Society)
2004	Board certified in transfusion medicine
2010	Associate professor of medicine, Vienna Medical University
2011	MBA Health Care Management, Vienna University of Economics and Business

Professional Experience

Michael Pfeilstöcker is consultant at the Third Department for Internal Medicine - Hematology/Oncology of Hanusch Hospital in Vienna, Austria and associate professor for medicine from the Vienna Medical University.

His research career started within the framework of the L. Boltzmann Institute for Leukemia Research and Hematology at Hanusch hospital which is meanwhile part of the L. Boltzmann Cluster Oncology.

Other Experience and Professional Memberships

Member: ASH, ÖGHO (Austrian Society Hematology and Oncology), ÖGIM (Austrian Society Internal Medicine)

Working groups: MDS platform ÖGHO (chair), IWG-PM MDS, GermanAustrianSwiss MDS group

Main Scientific Publications

Dr Pfeilstöcker's research interests include theoretical and clinical aspects of haematopoiesis and studies in patients with myeloid disorders, where the main focus is on myelodysplastic syndromes (MDS), but also includes clinical trials in AML. He chairs the MDS working group of the Austrian Society for Hematology and Oncology and is involved in world wide collaborative studies on this topic.

He has authored numerous articles in peer-reviewed journals including Blood and Leukemia and is a member of several professional organizations, including the American Society of Hematology.